Groups including the Parent and Teachers Association, the Boys and Girl Scouts, the Red Cross, and the Federation of Women's Clubs complained that the flag salute used at the time with a stiff arm and palm down was too much like Hitler's "Sieg Heil" and received modifications to the

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE CONTROVERSY

Official salute accompanied pledge

The Pledge of Allegiance has undergone several changes since it was written in 1892, with wording changes and even a change in the official salute to the flag.

First published in a children's magazine, Youth's Companion, in 1892, the Pledge of Allegiance was written as part of a flag-selling advertising campaign, according to the online encyclopedia, Wikipedia.

It was written by Baptist minister Francis Bellamy, a socialist, and was first used in public schools during Columbus Day observances in 1892 after a proclamation by President Benjamin Harrison.

Originally, instead of putting their hands over their hearts, people did what was known as the Bellamy salute, according to Wikipedia.

The Bellamy salute started with a military-style salute—hand to brow; then the arm was outstretched toward the flag, palm up, said Rex Curry, a Tampa, Fla. attorney, a pledge researcher. It gradually evolved to palm down.

"Quite often, they did not turn their palm up as Francis described," he said. "Then it became standard, not turning the palm up."

Three decades later, members of the Nazi Party in Germany would use the same outstretched arm in saluting Adolf Hitler, he said.

"It's an ominous parallel," Curry, a Libertarian, said.

Hitler may have come upon the salute by seeing it in films, and might not have purposely copied the Pledge of Allegiance salute, he said. "I have not found Hitler did it consciously."

People didn't start putting their hands over their hearts until 1942, after the United States was embroiled in World War II, Curry said.

"Congress didn't decide to inject itself in the mess until 1942, when they came up with the idea that they wanted everyone to start doing their hand over their heart," Curry said. "It was becoming incredibly embarrassing," he added, referring to the similarities between the pledge salute and the Nazi salute.

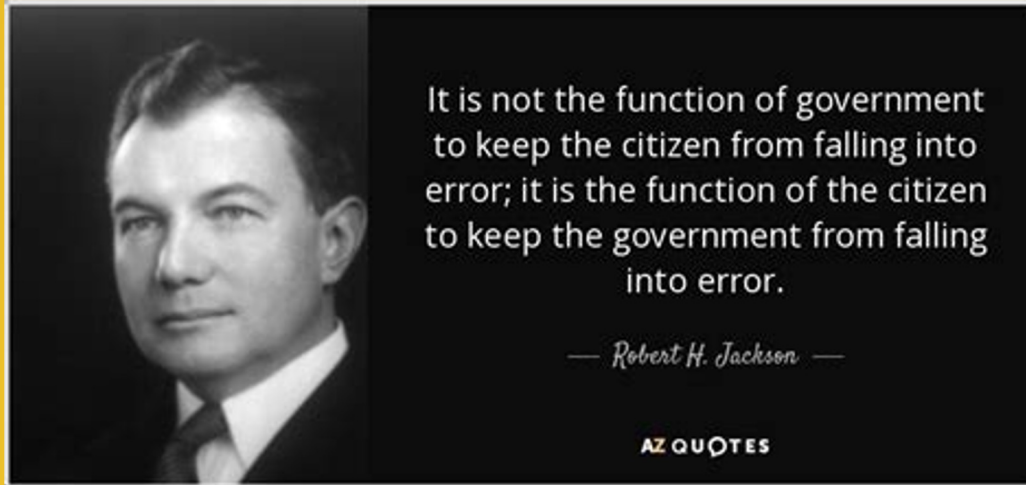

The original salute: Americans in the decades before World War II, including these schoolchildren, said the Pledge of Allegiance as they saluted the flag with outstretched arms. The salute was changed to a hand over the heart in 1942.

THE NUREMBERG CODE

The voluntary consent of the human subject is absolutely essential.

This means that the person involved should have legal capacity to give consent; should be so situated as to be able to exercise free power of choice, without the intervention of any element of force, fraud, deceit, duress, over-reaching, or other ulterior form of constraint or coercion; and should have sufficient knowledge and comprehension of the elements of the subject matter involved, as to enable him to make an understanding and enlightened decision. This latter element requires that, before the acceptance of an affirmative decision by the experimental subject, there should be made known to him the nature, duration, and purpose of the experiment; the method and means by which it is to be conducted; all inconveniences and hazards reasonably to be expected; and the effects upon his health or person, which may possibly come from his participation in the experiment.

The duty and responsibility for ascertaining the quality of the consent rests upon each individual who initiates, directs or engages in the experiment. It is a personal duty and responsibility which may not be delegated to another with impunity.

THE NUREMBERG CODE

The experiment should be such as to yield fruitful results for the good of society, unprocurable by other methods or means of study, and not random and unnecessary in nature.

3.

The experiment should be so designed and based on the results of animal experimentation and a knowledge of the natural history of the disease or other problem under study, that the anticipated results will justify the performance of the experiment.

4.

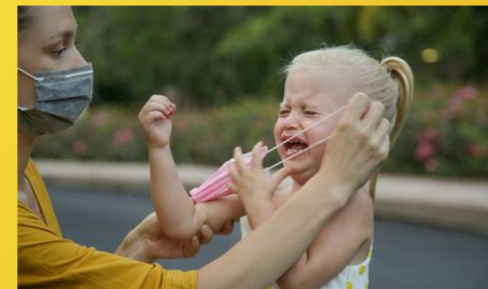

The experiment should be so conducted as to avoid all unnecessary physical and mental suffering and injury.
